PARQUET TILES

Parquet flooring is made up of short wooden battens that are slotted together in a geometric mosaic. This gives a decorative flooring effect that is both beautiful and long-lasting.

Parquet flooring first became popular with European aristocracy in the 1600s. The intricate wooden patterns became a popular replacement for marble floors as it required less maintenance. However, this original form of parquet flooring was very expensive and took great skill to create and so installing parquet flooring became an extravagant demonstration of wealth.

Thankfully, parquet flooring isn't quite so expensive anymore and is now a popular form of flooring for all sorts of homes.
